Review of Property Management Procedures

Reviewing your units current property management procedures is essential, not only to your success as a leader but more importantly your units survival on the battlefield. Knowing your property and properly managing it will lead to a successful deployment and redeployment of your unit.

Review of Property Management Procedures

Property management procedures, roles, and responsibilities are predetermined and outlined in your units Tactical Standard Operating Procedure (TACSOP), unit supply SOP, policy letters, memorandums of agreement, and various regulations.

Review of Property Management Procedures

Your units TACSOP provides strategic guidance to accomplish unit missions. It also provides the framework for internal and external procedures established for your units property management while conducting operations in a tactical environment.

Review of Property Management Procedures

Your unit supply SOP provides procedural guidance on the daily operation of your unit supply room during garrison or tactical operations. These procedures are incorporated into your unit TACSOP.

Review of Property Management Procedures

Policy letters establish command policy that allows subordinate leaders to develop programs to meet mission objectives. Policy letters may change or have a crucial impact on your units property management procedures.

Review of Property Management Procedures

Memorandums of Agreement (MOA) establish a mutual framework governing the respective organizational relationships, responsibilities, and activities between your unit and organizations external to your unit. The areas of responsibility and relationships contained in the MOA provide the concept under which agreements will be executed.

Review of Property Management Procedures

Army regulations, field manuals and pamphlets are the basis from which all property management procedural guidance is derived.